What does the new Access Copyright licence mean for me as a Brock student?

How does this licence affect me?

The licence gives Brock instructors a range of options for sharing learning materials with you. This means that you have the potential to access materials in various ways, including:

- Digital copies posted on Isaak/Sakai
- Print coursepacks (which will be cheaper, as there will no longer be a 10¢ per page copyright fee)
- Print handouts
- Print copies on Library reserves
- Digital copies emailed to you.

What will the licence cost me?

The licence fee is an annual fee of $26 per Full Time Equivalent student. Undergraduate students will be charged a per credit fee and graduate students will be charged the fee in their Fall session.

What rights do I get under the licence?

Most of the copying you do as a Brock student is likely covered by the fair dealing exception in the Copyright Act. For example, if you want to copy a book chapter as research for an assignment or include a figure from an article in your thesis, this is likely fair dealing and does not require permission. If you're concerned that what you want to do goes beyond fair dealing, the Access Copyright licence may give you additional rights to copy materials and share them with your instructors and fellow students. For more information, contact copyright@brocku.ca

Who do I contact if I have questions?

- For coursepack questions – contact tlockyer@brocku.ca
- For Isaak/Sakai questions – contact cpi@brocku.ca
- For Library reserves – contact reserves@brocku.ca
- For general copyright inquiries – contact copyright@brocku.ca