Leadership

By: Cheyenne McIntyre

To me leadership means that someone takes the stand and guides everyone to greatness and victory. Leadership is something that you will need all your life. Showing leadership means that you are a role model to younger or older people showing that you can do anything, in your power. Leadership can be a great quality because when you show leadership, it tells people that you are very confident, strong, and independent.

I do not think leadership styles change according to the situation because when you are in a tough situation you have to act the same as if you were in a situation that was very common to you.

Some qualities and characteristics a good leader will have are patience, honesty, confidence, intelligence and most of all the support of your team, for you to know that they are right behind your back and that you can know that you can trust them.

What I can learn from my own experiences is that whatever you do you can fix it by simply believing that you can do it. To be a leader you can encourage others around you by listening to others and participate as much as you can to get their full potential. To my own experiences about being a leader, you have to have faith that you can be terrific to everybody you lead. You also have to show them that you have all the good qualities of a strong leader.

This is important because when you show that you are a leader on the inside, it will defiantly show on the outside. A tip you might want to remember is that if you want to become a leader you can easily demonstrate all the skills of a leader and that will show them how well you can work with others.

So, the most important thing to learn from this is that you have to be a leader at heart and mind.