This 3-year Bachelor of Arts in Community Health degree provides students with a broad, well-rounded understanding of health and wellness that supports work in various healthcare sectors, or pursuit of additional training in a career-specific field.

Program Description

- Explore the art and science of promoting health, preventing disease, and improving the health of children, teens and adults in local, national, and global communities.
- Use the flexible elective options to build a personalized course of study and gain theoretical and hands-on experience relevant to today's complex and changing health care system.
- Combine in-class learning with internship and volunteer opportunities to develop skills and experience in illness management, disease prevention, wellness education, and health promotion.
- Opportunities to combine the Community Health degree with a college diploma in Dental Hygiene or Pharmacy Technician.
